This year the annual festival of the "Russian National Award in Landscape Architecture" will be taking place in Moscow for the fifth time on the 17-21 November 2014. It is the most prestigious and important event for the professional landscape community in Russia. Together with the exhibition of the Award nominees various lectures, round tables, open discussions and public meetings and events have been planned and included in the professional program.

The Russian Federation is currently experiencing a real "boom" in the development of landscape architecture. Every year the Russian landscape professionals offer new designs and publish professional journals and books. In 2011, the country accepted the Bologna educational system and opened landscape architectural training courses at bachelor and masters levels. In a growing economy, the landscape architectural profession has become a very specific demand.

The Award is an annual competition and exhibition reflecting modern achievements of Russia in the field of landscape architecture and construction. It is aimed to attract attention of Government officials and general public to importance of landscapes, their increasing role in social life, huge challenges and responsibilities concerning landscape policies. Professional landscape architects, outstanding representatives of domestic and foreign schools of landscape architecture, government officials of Moscow, St. Petersburg and other regions of Russia, town-planners, ecologists, specialists in cultural studies, housing and communal services managers, teachers, students, representatives of mass media and other experts are invited to participate.

For the first time in the history of the International Federation of landscape architects (IFLA) World Congresses, it's 52nd Congress will be held in Russia with the main topic "History of the Future". The dramatic story of the region gave the international landscape architecture world amazing examples of revitalisation and reconstruction of 'lost' landscapes.

This year the Youth landscape forum is also included into the program of the National award, the youth creative competition of Art installations with the same topic "History of the Future" is going to take place during the festival.
